THE INTERVIEW ISSUE

The house was built in 1938 for Mr. Edward Swift Shorter, with Atlanta's Henry Tombs serving as the home's original architect. Located in Green Island, it's the kind of neighborhood where families put serious roots and houses pass from one generation to the next.

Let It Shine

With a perfect mix of the sleek and the sublime, the Harris' home in Green Island radiates a refined and understated glamour.

“ The house provides a background for entertaining and family life with a comfortable yet unique elegance.”

– Interior Decorator Beth Beaudoin

BACK PATIO

The backyard garden is a personal oasis for the Harrises, and it's easy to see why. They created an environment that brings the outdoors in and the indoors out with the right decoration and space. A cement coffee table adds an element of age and can withstand the humidity.

POOL PAVILION

Perhaps one of the best features of the home, the pool pavilion was redone in 2008 by Jack Jenkins after tornado damage. Superior Pools created an outdoor oasis that can be used year round (the family loves to heat the pool on Christmas Eve for a dip in December!) With outdoor furniture from Restoration Hardware an outdoor concrete table by Brent Miller Designs, this pavilion is the ideal space to enjoy time outside, no matter the season.
